Winemaking Fermentation takes place traditionally in steel tanks with an extended maceration period. Afterwards, the wine is aged in large botti for at least 30 months, enhancing its elegance and allowing the terroir to express itself clearly, without an overpowering influence of oak.

Tasting notes Pure red and purplish fruit, framed by silky, refined tannins. On the palate, it shows extreme finesse and beguiling beauty, with a translucent character and an elegant balance achieved through gentle extraction and subtle oak influence. A wine of remarkable purity and elegance
